

A SEPARATION PROCESS

ABSTRACT

A method of separating components from a metal based composite, the method including the steps of increasing the size of a component to be separated and separating the increased sized component from the other components of the composite.